The Daily Standard

Thursday, January 11, 1872. Confidence in Ministers and Mea No wonder the local official organ is an adept in quoting Egyptian precedents in representative government. For its great prototype the chameleon is notoriously an inhabitant of the valley of the Nile, - and like that singular reptile, it changes its political bues, but generally without thy me or reason. It not only, however, partakes of the remarkable peculiarities of the Egyptian reptile, but at the same time acts a part like the story it has recently told about the representative Opposition in Egypt. But a few weeks ago this self-same local organ "breathed out threatenings" against the present Ministry. It was among the first to call in not very set phrases nor in no very genial temper for opposition. Now, however, following the Egyptian precedent, it uses its best exertions to suppress all opposition. Truly, we never witnessed a more apt illustration of the chameleon, nor a better exemplification of its Egyptian precedent. Whether the Dog Star, so femous in Egyptian history, has shed its influence over our cotemporary and imbued it with the qualities of the spaniel-the disposition to lick the hand that cuffed it-we know not; but really considering the canine fidelity of journalistic concern to its master, and its sudden change of political hue, one is impressed with the idea that we really have, in our newspaper world, s reptilian mammal that changes its political creed as often as required, whilst it submits with spaniel-like humility to the good or ill temper of its lordly musters. Let any one take for instance its recent articles decrying opposition to the Ministry, when but a few issues back it advocated the strongest kind of resistance to the Government,-and ask what influence can such a journal exert, or what reliance can be placed on its utterances? We leave the public to form its own answer to this question,-whilst we briefly discuss the question of Opposition We hold that there are two heads under which the country—the members of the Assembly-have to consider the present Ministry: Firstly as men, -and secondly, if acceptable as men, as to measures. Now as men, it is notoriously the fact, that the present Ministry was formed without consulting a majority or any of the members of the Assembly except those who hold office. Such being the fact, it is clear and undisputed that the present Ministry is not of the people's making. It is true that two members of the Ministry went back to their constituents and through the moderation of the Opposition were returned unopition were returned unop shirked the responsibility of re-election. But even if all the Ministers had gone back to the people, it would not alter the fart that the people bave not created the McCreight Ministry. On the contrary, the gentlemen who compose it are but nominees of the Crown. Had a majority of the Legislature been consulted before accepting office there would have been some slight ground to bold that the people had created the Ministry. As it is, the Ministry has done nothing more -but in the case of the Premier something less—than a new responsible Ministry in the other Provinces; for all responsible Ministers in the Dominion, holding seats in the elective branch of the Legislature, if they accept a portfolio, have to be re-elected. But here comes the difference between such responsible Ministers and ours. There the responsible Ministers are first acceptable to a majority of the Legislature by a majority wote, then they accept office, and next they appeal to constituencies for re election. Here, ours were the nomineed of the Crown,-almost self-elected. not the choice of the majority,-not the leaders of the majority,-not appointed after the consent of the majority had been obtained,—and besides were not the men who had been battling for the rights and advancement of the people in any one particular. Naturally enough then,—justly so too,—the people through their representatives have the undoubted right to question the Ministry as men.

The constitution gives us the right to have a People's Ministry,—to see that the personnel of the Ministry is such as commands the confidence of the major hy. That is not only a right, but it is the first duty of the majority of our Assembly to consider whether the men who ence. If that question be settled in their favor, then and not till then can the estion of measures be entertained. If question be determined adversely to the personnel of the Ministry, then and not till then will men who really command the espport and confidence of the major-ity constitue a Ministry. Every attempt through official organs, by private intrigue,—by the stale cry of factious opposition,—by holding out the allurement of office,—by creating prejudice against the natural leaders of the major ity of the Assembly, will be resorted to to secure the success of the present Govent. But let not the people nor their representatives be deceived, and afterwards be laughed at for their folly,— by being hoodwinked, bamboozled, hum-

ORIGIN OF THE ILLNESS OF THE PRINCE OF WALES .- The cable dispatches have variously represented the disease of the Prince of Wales as the typhus and the typhoid fevers. The London Times, of the 29th Nov., sets all doubt on this point at rest. The Prince is suffering from a serere form of the typhoid or enteric fever, strictly symotic in its origin, the poison which produces it being derived from imperfect sewage and decaying vege-tables. The more severe effects of the poison are to produce the fever; its minor effects are to induce less serious disturbances in the human system. The unfortunate Prince appears to have contracted the disease while sojourning with Lord Londesborough, as did others of his party, among them Lord Ches-terfield, who survived the attack but a few days. In the case of Lord Chesterfield the worst and always fatal form of the disease early became manifest, viz.: malignant pleasation of the intestines. Doubtless, it is the evidence of this form of the fever upon the Prince, which, at one time, banished hope from the minds of his attendant physicians. Sandringham, the country seat of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, is in Norfolk, one of the eastern counties of England, and at least 120 miles from the metropolis. The Prince bought the estate soon after his marriage, and it has continued to be his favorite resort ever since. It is a retired and beautiful locality, and the Prince's residence is fitted up with great

A CURE FOR CANCER .- Charles Yardley, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, writes thus to the Cincinnati Enquerer: "I wish to tell how I cured my cancer last summer, without pain or money. Eight years ago a cancer came on my nose; it grew slow for several years. The last two years it grew very fast—it became frightful. It had begun to eat out my left eye. I had paid hundreds of dollars, and had tried doctors from far and near without finding relief. Last summer I drank wild tes, putting the tea grounds on my cancer every night as a poultice. In six weeks my cancer was cured. I am now 62 years old. I have told this remedy to several that had cancer, I know of two that have been cured since. I believe wild tea grows over the country generally, always on high

THE TRUTH, THE WHOLE TRUTH, ETC .- It is strange how closely men read the papers We never say anything that nobody don't like, but we soon hear of it. If, however, one in a while we happen to say a good thing we never hear of it. We may pay some man a hundred compliments, and give him a dozen puffs, and he takes it as a tribute to his High Tipes.—) reatness, and never thinks of it-never thinks it does him any good. But if we happen to say anything that this very man don't like, or something that he imagines is a reflection on him or his character, see how quick he haves up and gets mad about it. All our evils are duly charged to us, but we us to make use of a portion of his letter. mever, apparently, get any credit for what the extracts are as follows:

There was a difficulty as to storage room, but this has been effectually removed by a grant of space at the Crystal Palace, Mr. Hughes being shairman of the company which controls that magnificent building.

night a body of men, armed with rifles and shot-guns, surrounded the cabin at Butte Creek leves, occupied by Curtiss and Masterson, who were watching the levee to prevent a flood. They compelled Curtiss and Masterson to remain in the cabin as prisoners, while between Butte Creek and the high land. Up to neon to-day about 500 feet of the levee was washed away. The water was within six or seven feet of the top of the levee, and it was entirely secure. The attacking party were masked and otherwise disguised.

FROM THE INLET .- The barque Delaware, Capt. Rollins, arrived in Royal Roads from Messrs. Moody & Co.'s mill, Burrard Inlet, on Tuesday night. She is chartered by Mesers. GREAT CHANGES IN ENGLAND during the last ten years-all for the betterand that they will continue, is no less certain, so that without materially altering the Monarchical form of Government—the practical working of it will be Republican. The Queen and her successors will be secure in their position so long as they fulfil the will of the people, and avoid scandalous lives; when the period arrives for the revision of the civil list, it may not be as large as the present one, and most probably there will be a limit placed to the number of the members of the royal household entitled to pensions. THE POSITION OF THE WORKING CLASSES is undergoing a great change for the better; less hours for labor, and a slight increase in wages-I allude to the manufacturing disaccount. Twenty years hence will, I think, show a marked improvement in that, as in

No ama-teur sportsman had a better conception of the value of three jacks than Col. Alvord, or played a closer game of seven-up. He could hold the tiger as near levelias any other man iving. Col. Alvord readily consented to enlighten Mr. Beecher, and the two had freque meetings in the back room of the Branch Bank, where the preacher became theore-tically proficient in all the arts and tricks of Having fully informed himself, he preached a powerful sermon, which created considerable unjust suspecton that Brother Beecher had, at some period of his life, nown how it was himself.

WEARING A Sign .- A rather goung man, whose features exhibited every symptom of having been slightly tinged with emerald, lately entered a jewelry store in New York, and gazing earnestly into the show-case remarked :—"You've got a heap of mighty pretty breastpins thar, mister. you ask 'em?" "What sort of a pin would like to look at?" asked the merchant. Well, I dunno," said the visitor pointing to plain masonic pin (the compass and the square), "how much is that yere?"
